NO TREATY

Between Turkey and the United States Government

REGARDING THE RIGHTS OF MEN

Of Armenian Birth, Naturalized in this Country, to Revisit Turkey-The Latter Government Can Exclude them if it wants to-The President's Reply to the WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The President to-day sent to the senate a reply to the senate resolution relative to the rights of the United States citizens of Armeniambirth who are allowed to visit Turkey and passports are recognized. In a letter to the President the secretary of state says that the papers of recent years show that the Eurshis government claims the right to exclude from the Ottoman territory such naturalized citizens. The right is claimed as a prerogative of sovereignty. Its enforcement has not been opposed nor has remonstrance been made says in case of arrest or punitive proceedings on ground of their having become citizens of the United States without imperial permission. Passports of such people are recognized, but the recognition does not prevent the exercise of the right to exclusion or expulsion.

The secretary says that although no treaty of naturalization exists between the United States and Turkey resulating this point, no instance has yet been pressed by the Turkish government in assertion of a right to treatythe individual as a Turkish subject or to punish him for the alleged offense of becoming a citizen of a foreign state without permission.

The second scanch of the senate inquiry saked whether the families of naturalized citizens are permitted to leave Turkey and come to the United States, and upon this point the secretary says that the naturalization laws cannot operate by indirection or by executive interpretation to make a citizen of a person who has never been within the furisdiction of the United States.

The Turkish sovernment has on several occasions permitted the emigration of such families, but it has also asserted discretionary power in the premises and refused such emigration. The good offices of the United States minister have formally been exerted on all proper occasions to assist the emigration of such persons. rights of the United States citizens of Armenian birth who are allowed to visit

The Iron Trade.

The Iron Trade.

CLEVELAND. O., Jan. 23.—The Iron Trade Review this week will says:
"Favorable signs are more numerous in the iron trade, and the past fortnight has put a beter aspect on nearly every department of the market. The advance in Bessemer pig iron and in steel billets noted last week has continued, and in the case of the later amounts to $2.50 from the lowest point touched in the holidays. Finished material shows irregularities, but in nearly all lines there is a firmer feeling with increased buying. In part the larger demand is attributed to better consumption, in part to a desire on the part of buyers to anticipate higher prices. The disparity between current consumption and the capacity of rolling mills and steel works is still the dominating element in the situation; yet reports from all directions indicate that the past week has brought a larger tomage to most mills than any preceding one in three months."

The Kentucky Deadlock.

House Foreign Affairs Committee,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 22.—Contrary to expectation to-day's meeting of the house foreign affairs committee did not deal with any of the several delicate questions before the committee except the Armentan massacres. In reaponse to the overwhelming demand from religious and other organisations, resolutions, in some respects patterned after those before the senate, were adopted and Mr. Quign was directed to report them to the house. Nothing was done about Ambasandor Bayard's two speeches because Mr. Dinamore, of the sub-committee in charge of that matter, asked for a postponement. The committee adopted the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill, which, however, does not make any decided changes from lat year's allowances.

STATE OF THE PARTY.

HOW THE TARIFF WORKS.

McKinley and Wilson Laws Compared. Increase of Imports—Decrease in Reve-

Washington special in Chicago Inter-Ocean: Some remarkable facts with reference to the workings of the new Occan: Some remarkable facts with reference to the workings of the new tariff law came to the surface in connection with the announcement of the December imports and exports and those of the year just ended. That the importations were enormously increasing under the new haw had been well understood, but it was searcely realized that the increase was so great nor was it deemed possible that with such an enormous increase of importations derevances from customs could be so greatly decreased. Yet his is a fact. The importations during the frest sixteen months of the Wilson law, which onded with December, whose figures have just come to hand, amounted to $10.03.997.285. This was an inrease of over $107.000.000 in amount as compared with the bast extrem months of the McKinley law. Yet in spite of this enermous increase in importations, there was a tremendous failing off in receipts. The receipts in the last sixteen months of the McKinley law amounted to $400,085.083, while the receipts in the last sixteen months of the McKinley law amounted to $400,085.083, while the receipts in the last sixteen months of the McKinley law amounted to $400,085.083, while the receipts in the last sixteen months of the McKinley law amounted to $400,085.083, while the receipts in the last sixteen months of the McKinley law amounted to $400,085.083, while the receipts in the last sixteen months of the McKinley law amounted to $400,000.000 in revenue.

One of the features of this statement with reference to the increase of importations which especially interests members of Congress and others engaged in the study of the financial problems now demanding attention is the effect which this increased importation must have had upon the stock of gold in this country. Aside from the gold which amounts to only about $40,000,000 on year, our supply of gold comes from the anticles which we sell to other nations.

Despite the claim of the advocates of the anticles which we sell to other nations.

Despite the claim of the advocates of low tariff that the reduction of duties would open the doors of the world to our products, we have not increased our expects in any sum worth mentioning during the time in which the imports have been increasing so enaymously. The exports during the first sixteen months of the Wilson law amount to only $1,132,115,297, against $1,113,232,812 in the last sixteen months of the McKinley law.

We get rid of our gold by buying articles from other nations and by spending it in travel abroad and paying the interest and principal of American securities held abroad. When it is securities held abroad. When it is never have purchased abroad $167,000,000 more of foreign productions, under the Wilson law, than we did in the corresponding sixteen months of the McKinley law, it is easy to see where $107,000,000 of our gold has gone in the meantime. Thus we have lost gold enormously, while there has been no gain worth mentioning by increased sales of our own products abroad.

To those desiring to examine the workings of the new tariff law in comparison with the McKinley law, the following tables will be of especial interest. It will be observed that they show, first, an enormous increase of importations of foreign goods in compensating advantages in any increase in exportations but $30,000,000 decrease in importations, but $30,000,000 decrease in freedrations of the McKinley law, and the first sixteen months of the Wilson law, also the expects during the corresponding periods:

General Lew Wallace's First Literary Effort when a Schoolboy.

Harper's Round Table: "How did you first come to think of writing?"

A smile of amusement crept over the general's face at the recollection of general's face at the recollection of those crude boyish days. "My first literary effort was made in a society of lads near my own age, of which I was a member when about sixteen. Berry Sulgrove, once editor of the Indianapolis Journal, was president, and he assigned each one his part in our weekly meetings—a speech, essay, story, or poem. I was ordered to write a story. I undertook a love tale of the crusades of the tenth century, in weekly instalments, with the title of 'The Man-at Arms' 'The leading character was a Span-

Arms.' The leading character was a Spanish grandee, a duke of high Castilian line, who dwelt among the mountains of Spain. He had numerous valiant retainers, and one only child—a proud and beautiful daughter named Inez. In the service of the duke was a handsome page of eighteen, brave, courtly, endowed with manly graces and a talent for music. This he used so skillfully that the love songs he sang to his light guitar took captive the heart of fair linez. Their love was discovered, and the handsome page banished from the castle. But they managed to meet, and my hero carried off the prize. Together they mounted his snow white steed, and dashed away to the hermitage of an old monk, who lived alone on a wild and dreary mountain side. The duke pursued the fugitives with armed retinue, and brought his disobedient daughter back to his ancestral halis.
The page escaped, went to Venice, and enlisted in the army about to march to Palestine. He wore his armor by night and day never opening his visor-except to eat, so that his nearest comrades rarely saw his face. He performed prodigies of valor, was ever in the forefront of battle, a mysterious but conspicuous figure. He became famous and was made a knight. By the time he returned to Spain all the countries of the Mediterranean had heard of his prowcess, and were proud to do him honor.
He was tendered a grand banquet at the duke's castle; but the old enemy did not recognize in the Knight of the Closed Helmet his former page. The lovelyof have forgotten it—and all was forgiven, the old duke only too willing to call the brave warrior of Holy Cross his son."

"Did you complete the story?"

"Oh yes! Every week my instalment was rendy, my audience wrapt and sympathetic, and the generous applause most encouraging."

"Two hundred and thirty pages of foolscap, closely written, and I am sorry to say it was lost. I left, it in my father's library when I went to the Mexican war in 1847, when I returned, the unfortunate 'Man-at-Arms' was not

Owing to the sleet being formed on the
